John was an avid conversationalist, always ready to meet new people and talk for hours with family and friends. He loved to share his stories of his Seabees experiences and help people with their projects or show them how to do things around the house. His service with the Seabees gave him skills he used throughout his life to help his family and friends. He was always there to lend a hand when someone needed help. He and Ethel liked to travel and visit family, making trips back home to their hometown of Pontiac every year, and after retiring they were able to take some long trips across the country to see the sights and visit family. He talked frequently about these trips and the things they were able to see and enjoy throughout their lives.

John enjoyed his grandchildren and great grandchildren very much. He was always a tormentor, which his family can attest to, and loved to pester, dunk, and tease and generally have fun with all of his family. He will always be remembered with a smile on his face and a laugh in his heart.
