SHOW – ME – STATE

Missouri men went to war when July was cold and gray

They did what they were told to do there was nothing they could say

With men they had never known before to a place they had never heard

They never knew the reason why but never said a word

They didn't know the foreign foe and the August days came round

The sun had burned their boyish faces but they never made a sound

They never heard the silent word or the way that it destroys

They felt the pain as soldiers do but never make a noise

There on a sandy hill their life had ebbed away

They dreamed of home in a distant land, but there was nothing they could say

This is dedicated to all Missourians from the first to the last.

The people are what make Missouri a great state.
