“ Jimmy loved his Mom and talked about how much he loved her all the time. Jimmy was friendly and kind to others, he didn't hold ill will against others. Every morning he waved to the kids as they were headed to the bus. Halloween, he came over to give the kids candy. It smelled so bad from all the smoke that it went right in the trash and the trash went right to the outside bin and I bought the kids another bag, but it was the thought that counts. He had a bright smile and laughed easily and joked a lot. Jimmy had insomnia and used to stay up at night and he would tell me stories about my cat hunting rabbits in the moonlight, somehow Fuzzball was a great source of amusement to him. Jimmy was loved. Walking to the bus stop without Jimmy sitting out there on the sidewalk in front of his house is sad. I am going to miss having Jimmy as a neighbor. He had a way of making the days brighter and keeping me up to date with the neighborhood news. The kids are sad that Jimmy is gone and miss him too. I wish Jimmy had been more accepting of help and taken better care of himself.
