

Pamela Mangan

January 30, 1963 - January 23, 2017

Pamela Kay Mangan, age 53, of Morrisville, Missouri, passed away January 23, 2017, at Citizens Memorial Hospital, in Bolivar.

Pamela was born on January 30, 1963, in Colinga, California, to Peggy Deloris (Moore), and Ralph McKinley Scott. She was known for cooking, especially her fried pies and egg rolls. She also enjoyed quilting and her dogs, but loved her family most of all.

She is preceded in death by her father, Ralph Scott, and a brother, Douglas Scott.

Pamela is survived by her husband John Mangan; children, Steven Franklin Mangan, and his wife Jenny, and their son, Connor, Michael Eugene Mangan, and his wife Heather, Daniel Scott Mangan, and Emily Nicole Mangan; her mother Peggy Scott; sisters, Barbara Scott, Deloris Zimmerman, Becky Longing, and Tammy Boswell; as well many aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, and other family members.

A family memorial at the Crossroads cemetery will be held a later date.

“ It's still really hard to believe she's gone. We had our little gang that always hung out together. Pam, me, Lisa, Karen, Clyde (my brother), and Carrot. I think about the crazy stuff we used to do. We were onery but never hurt anyone. Toilet paper yards, soap windows, steal wine from my parents and yes, we drank it, did the same with cigarettes. Out of all the crazy things we did the last time i sat down and talked to Pam she told me she was always scared the most over the times when we were in junior high how we would sneak away from school, take our lunch money, and go down to the little country store and spend it on candy. If my mom and/or Pams grandma would have found out we would have been in trouble. I remember Doug catching us a couple times. He would threaten us but always with a smile. Wasn't scared of him. She was always so nervous when we would do this so it didn't happen a lot. Although we didn't talk a lot we both always knew the other would stop what they were doing to talk or listen. I will miss her.
