“ It's nearly impossible to look back at my time at MCE without remembering Tom. He was always up for a laugh, prank or joke, and when he got serious, you knew it was bad. I've been on the receiving end of his grade school antics, learned to sew with him in junior high, and endured teasing about being a bookworm... and I still smile when I remember what a good friend he was.

How can we ever forget that day in 5th grade, where he tested Mrs. Montgomery's patience-and the classroom door ended up with a moon shaped crack... Tom was legendary after that! (and probably before to the teachers)

I remember him as stubborn, mischievous, and wildly intelligent-though he usually went for the joke instead of the A. Class clown? Definitely!

I'm sorry we never ran into each other after he left MCE, it would have been great to see him, one last time.
