“ Wayne, I was first introduced to you in September 1960 in the SMS library. We spent a lot of time there swapping tales. From the beginning I always admired and respected your calm, deliberative manner and always with a twinkle in your eye. I knew there was a humorous remark to follow. Over the many years since those days I have observed what a good man, husband, and father you have been with your family, You will be greatly missed, but never forgotten. Joyce and I send our love and prayers to Norma, Brent, Eric, and their families May God comfort you.

“ Mr. DeRossett was my best and favorite high school teacher. I partially attribute my ability to complete my post high school education and my successful career in cancer care to his patient and thorough teaching.

“ He was a great teacher, wonderful man, and amazing mentor. He never knew that he was the most influential mathematician in my life. He made me want to learn and be great at math. I never went as far as I could, but he made me want to be great at what I did. Thank you Mr D for all you have taught me.

“ I remember a particularly rambunctious day. Me D became tired of our verbal shenanigans. He turned around and gave us the scolding needed. He got frustrated and threw the chalk, blindly, over his shoulder. Landed perfectly in the chalk tray from 10' without looking. The most super hero move I have seen in real life.

“Norma, Brent, Eric and your respected families, please except my heart filled condolences for your loss of Wayne. Mr. DeRossett was handed to me at the beginning of my seventh year of school. St first I wasn't sure about him, always chewing gum, always so soft spoken and passionate about his Math. I remember in eighth grade after being given an assignment, I asked him why we had to do this stuff, once I was out of his class, I would never use it again. He turned, and gave me that sheepish grin of his and told me to “appease him”. I did. In 1980 while working at Walmart in Bolivar, we were swamped with customers, and I was asked to open a line. The trick back then was to be able to type fast(thank you Mrs Dunseth) in order to move the lines. I immediately began checking people out, without really. Looking up st them. I was deep into strategic mode, when I hear this soft familiar voice saying, “But Mr DeRossett, I am never going to use this again.” I looked up and smiled, and said, “just appease me”. We both laughed. In later years he also taught my kids. Mr. D, the world lost a truly remarkable man that was truly loved and admired by his students, and as you gained your Angel wings, we lost a wonderful reminder of teenage years gone by. Please Dear Lord, wrap each member of his family and friends, tightly in your arms. Give them the strength and courage to endure the dark days ahead, and show them your love. We are praying for you, and share in your sorrow.

“ I am a 1985 graduate of Pleasant Hope High School, and can attribute much of the success in my career as an electrical engineer, to a solid mathematics foundation provided by Mr. DeRossett. To this day, I have great respect for such a strong mentor in my life, during my formidable years. Thank you Mr. DeRossett for investing in my life, and the investments you made in so many other lives throughout the years. -David Kirby
